
BRAND VOICE REFERENCE

Tekky speaks like a coach who's seen 5,000 sessions.

The locked voice rules every email, SMS, ad, and AI-drafted reply follows when it goes out in TEKKY's name. Read these once. Flag anything that drifts.

01 · THE VOICE

Coach. Not marketer.

Tekky doesn't sell. Tekky coaches. Every word that leaves the brand has to pass this test: would a coach who's seen 5,000 youth-soccer sessions actually say this out loud to a parent on the sideline?

Voice rules

- Specific over abstract. “First touch in tight space” beats “improve technique.” Always name the moment.
- Player-first. The kid is the hero. The parent is the funder. Tekky is the tool. Never confuse the order.
- Earned, not given. Skill is earned. Confidence is earned. Wins are earned. We sell the work, not the magic.
- Calm under pressure. No hype words, no caps-lock, no exclamation-point storms. Coaches who scream don't last.
- One idea per sentence. Parents read these on phones in carline. If they have to re-read, we lost them.

Forbidden words

These get cut on every pass. They make us sound like every other youth-sports brand. They are off-brand.

- “Revolutionary” / “game-changing” / “next-level”
- “Synergy” / “solutions” / “leverage”
- “Just” (as in “just $59.95”) — undermines the price
- “Unleash” / “unlock your potential” / “take it to the next level”
- “At the end of the day” / “moving forward” / “circle back”
- “ROI” / “KPI” / acronyms generally

02 · AUDIENCE

Same voice. Different lens.

■ Parent	Concern: is my kid wasting time? Will this help? Trigger: watching their kid plateau. What lands: specific outcomes (“first touch under pressure”), real playing-time stories, “before/after” evidence. What doesn’t: hype, gimmicks, “feel the difference.”
■ Coach	Concern: does this fit my session plan? Will my players actually use it? Trigger: seeing a player ahead of their level after summer. What lands: drill specifics, weight + size data, training cycle integration. What doesn’t: parent-focused emotional copy.
■ Player	Concern: will I look good with this? Will I get better fast? Trigger: losing 1-v-1s they used to win. What lands: short reels, peer evidence, “train like the pros.” What doesn’t: long-form copy, parent-coded language.
■ Club	Concern: volume pricing, branding control, can we white-label. Trigger: board pressure to modernize. What lands: data on retention + skill progression, bulk-order terms. What doesn’t: consumer-grade emotional copy.

03 · EXAMPLES

Good vs. off-brand.

Subject line (parent funnel · touch 1)

- “Unleash your kid's potential with TEKKY!”
- “The drill that fixed my son's first touch in 14 days.”

Body copy (parent funnel)

- “Revolutionary training ball that takes skill to the next level.”
- “Smaller than a regulation ball. Same match-day weight. Players who train with it for two weeks tell us their first touch feels different the moment they switch back.”

Coach DM

- “We have synergistic solutions for your training program.”
- “Two of your players already train with this. Want a club discount code for the rest of the roster?”

AI-drafted reply (player inquiry)

- “Thanks for your interest! At the end of the day, our product helps unleash your potential!”
- “Hey — yeah, plenty of high-school players train with the TEKKY. Size 3 control, Size 5 weight. First two weeks you'll feel slower. Week three you'll feel sharper. That's the whole pitch.”

04 · ACKNOWLEDGED

Confirm voice ownership.

Sign below to confirm Paul + Philip have reviewed these voice rules. Any copy that ships in Tekky's name from this date forward follows them. Updates to the voice come through this doc — never inline in email threads.

Paul Hanson — initials:

Philip Lund — initials:

Date:
